RESPONSIBILITIES

1. Authority and Responsibility. The authority and responsibility outlined below will be exercised in accordance with applicable law and regulation, including references (a) through (c):

   a. SECNAV will:

      (1) Approve the establishment, including the mission, and the disestablishment of shore (field) activities of the DON.

      (2) Approve all permanent homeport or station assignments except those “temporary” changes incident to the start or completion of maintenance availabilities of less than 18 months’ duration.

      (3) Assign command or supervision, as appropriate, to the CNO, the CMC, the Comptroller of the Navy, the Judge Advocate General, the Chief of Naval Research, and such other offices and officials as required. These officials are authorized to delegate the command or supervision, as they deem appropriate. They will ensure that the functions necessary for accomplishing the mission of each shore (field) activity under their command or supervision are issued and that a copy of the issuing document is forwarded to the CNO.

   b. The CNO and the CMC will carry out the following actions for their respective Service:

      (1) Review recommendations for the establishment and disestablishment of shore (field) activities under CNO or CMC command to ensure conformity with current policies and procedures.

      (2) Submit proposed establishment and disestablishment actions and significant changes to assigned missions to SECNAV for approval, and issue approved actions.

      (3) Issue subsequent modifications, as appropriate, to establishment and disestablishment directives and mission statements.
(4) Issue the authoritative official list, including echelon of command or supervision, of all shore (field) activities as follows:

(a) CNO for Navy commands

(b) CMC for Marine Corps commands, and,

(c) CNO and CMC for combined Navy and Marine Corps commands

(5) Issue appropriate instructions, guidance, and information as required to enforce the guidelines and requirements of this instruction. Amplifying information such as proposed organization charts, joint operating agreements, memorandums of understanding for cooperative financial, administrative, or operational arrangements, and statements identifying staffing impact will be required as enclosures with all establishment action requests.

2. Command of Shore (Field) Activities. Command is the authority and responsibility for effectively using available resources and for planning the employment, organizing, directing, and coordinating of shore (field) activities in order to carry out the assigned missions. Command includes the authority and responsibility for mission, facilities, workload planning, and inspection. In addition, command includes responsibility for appropriate coordination and application of material and technical support, as well as other elements of support. For the purpose of this instruction, the assignment of supervision to Staff Assistants by SECNAV over assigned shore (field) activities encompasses the same degree of authority and responsibility as command.

3. Primary Support

   a. Primary support as used herein is the responsibility for providing or assuring the provision of resources (funds, manpower, facilities, and material) to a shore (field) activity of the Navy or Marine Corps to enable it to carry out its mission. Primary support complements the authority and responsibility assigned to command.
b. Primary support includes administrative, personnel and material support, and guidance and assistance in such matters as organization, procedures, budgeting, accounting, staffing, and the use of personnel, funds, material, and facilities. Support includes the responsibility to assist command in evaluating the operating effectiveness of shore (field) activities.

c. Although a single official will be charged with the primary support responsibility for each shore (field) activity, as appropriate, and on a case-by-case basis, elements of material and other support may flow from other organizations not charged with primary support responsibility. The official charged with primary support will maintain information concerning all elements of support and will ensure availability of this information to all supported shore (field) activities.

4. Assignment of Command and Support. Generally, responsibility for command and support for shore (field) activities will be assigned to the same commander or official. However, on a case-by-case basis, primary support responsibilities, and/or specific elements of support, when applicable may be assigned to a commander or official who is not assigned command.

5. Delegation of Command or Supervision Authority and Support. The commanders or officials assigned command and primary support by SECNAV may delegate command or supervision, as well as primary support, of shore (field) activities to other commanders or officials in their chain of command or supervision.

6. Command Support of Marine Corps Shore (Field) Activities Not in the Chain of Command of the CMC. The authority retained by the CMC for Marine Corps shore (field) activities or Marine Corps activities primarily staffed with Marine Corps personnel that are not assigned to the command of the CMC includes:

   a. Administrative authority to determine internal organization, ensure proper standards of morale and discipline, and to prescribe other procedures of Marine Corps personnel administration. This administrative authority does not include functional use of assigned Marine Corps personnel.
b. Authority to ensure proper training and a high degree of efficiency and readiness.

c. Authority for the establishment of training requirements.

d. Authority for the management and funding of Marine Corps non-appropriated fund activities.

e. Inspection authority to ensure a high standard of overall performance, but does not include mission performance, which is a responsibility of the commander to which assigned.

f. Authority for budgeting, accounting, and general administration of Marine Corps appropriations.

7. Area Coordination. Area coordination represents the responsibilities assigned to the CNO in chapter 4, articles 0404 and 0405 of reference (b). Area coordination is the authority and responsibility to initiate appropriate action, based on a horizontal overview of shore (field) activities and all Naval personnel located ashore on a geographic or naval complex basis, to ensure adequate support is provided to the Operating Forces of the Navy, to shore (field) activities, and to personnel of the Naval Service. This support represents an effective, efficient, economical, integrated, and coordinated effort.

a. Nature. Within a designated geographic area, the effective overall administration of the naval shore (field) establishment requires both functional (vertical) direction and lateral (horizontal) coordination. Vertical direction (exercise of command) is continuous. Horizontal coordination is consumer-oriented and exists to complement the command in the aggregate to ensure, at the point where support services are provided, that support is complete, adequate, and in balance to meet user requirements.

b. Scope. Area coordination embraces the total range of shore (field) activity missions, functions, and tasks, and the support requirements of the fleet, shore (field) activities, and naval personnel ashore. It includes the authority and responsibility to initiate cooperative or corrective action, on an area-wide basis, through the appropriate chains-of-command, to provide effective support to the fleet, to shore (field) activities, and to naval personnel ashore.

c. Designation of Commanders to Exercise Area Coordination. The CNO may designate commanders to exercise area coordination, subject to the provisions of paragraph 10 relating to shore (field) activities in the chain-of-command of the CMC. Area coordinators will typically be designated senior officials within an area or complex of naval activities whose presence, interest, and influence can resolve problems requiring cooperative action in a timely fashion.

d. Relationships with Command. The exercise of area coordination authority and responsibility may be of direct interest to commanders of shore (field) activities. In this regard, area coordinators will coordinate with commanders of shore (field) activities, as appropriate.

e. Representation. Commanders designated by the CNO as area coordinators will, in addition, represent and act for the SECNAV, the CNO and, with the specific concurrence of the CNO, will represent and act for other officials of the DON on such other individual matters as may be assigned. When acting in such capacity, authority will be commensurate with assigned responsibility.

f. Reporting. The commanding officer or head of each shore (field) activity will also report to and be responsible to the assigned area coordinator in matters pertaining to area coordination.

8. Area Coordination of Marine Corps Activities in the Chain of Command of the CMC

   a. The actions of area coordinators with regard to Marine Corps shore (field) activities in the chain of command of the CMC will generally include the initiation of appropriate action in cases where complexes of activities, which include Marine Corps activities in the chain of command of the CMC, can be improved, including consolidation of common service when practicable.

   b. Area coordination relationships between Marine Corps commanders of supporting establishments and Marine Corps district directors and officials designated, as area coordinators are the same as described in paragraph 10 of this instruction, with the following exceptions:

(1) In those cases where the CMC has assigned tasks and functions to an intermediate regional commander, commanders of Marine Corps supporting establishments will be guided by the regional commander’s policies and instructions. However, the commanders of Marine Corps supporting establishments will furnish such assistance as can be made available, from resources not required in the execution of their primary missions, upon request of the area coordinator.

(2) Elements of a Fleet Marine Force or Marine Corps supporting establishment temporarily or permanently stationed within the boundaries of a Navy shore (field) activity, will conform to those regulations of the area coordinator, or commanding officer or officer in charge of the shore (field) activity, which pertain to police, fire protection, security, safety, naval communications, and sanitation.

(3) Operating Forces of the Marine Corps not assigned to the operating Forces of the Navy or to a unified or specified command are under the command of the CMC, or a subordinate designated by the Commandant. Unless specifically instructed to the contrary, these units will have the same relationships with an area coordinator as are specified for Marine Corps supporting establishments.

9. Material and Technical Support

a. Material support responsibilities include such matters as the research, design, development, test, acquisition, procurement, contracting, production, construction, manufacture, fitting out, supply, maintenance, repair, overhaul, and modification of naval material.

b. Technical support responsibilities include professional advice, guidance, and assistance on such matters as the handling and upkeep of equipment and systems, human resource management, supply management, recreational activity management, and facilities maintenance management; the establishment of standards and procedures for specialized technical functions; and the review and evaluation of the service rendered.
c. Material and technical support will be provided directly to shore (field) activities, keeping commanders in the chain of command informed, as appropriate, or through the appropriate echelons of command when readiness may be affected or operational or significant management considerations are involved.

10. Naval Service-Wide Systems. All commanders charged with command, support, or area coordination will discharge their responsibilities with due regard for naval service-wide systems. Examples are: The Naval Telecommunications System, the Navy and Marine Corps Supply Systems, and the Manpower and Personnel Management Information System.
